PREFACE.

THE Third Part of the Library of the Late Joseph Bowles Learmont of Montreal consists mainly of items relating to Canada. Besides the books and pamphlets, there are portraits of George III and Queen Charlotte by Allan Ramsay, Court Painter, who doubtless made these portraits at the time of the coronation, numerous service and commemorative medals including Officer's and Knight's Crosses of the Legion of Honor, paintings in oils of six men's heads by John E. Millais with a note in the artist's autograph, and other interesting mementoes.

A number of items are closely associated with General Wolfe. There are two volumes presented by him to friends, the first, Vauban's "De l'Attaque et de la Defense des Places," A la Haye, 1737, given "to Lieut. Scott from his sincere friend Jam. Wolfe. Canterbury, May, 1756"; the second, Maréchal de Puysegur's "Art de la Guerre," Paris, 1749, presented "to Ld. Fitzmaurice from his friend Jam. Wolfe. . . . . December 1757." An important collection of Wolfiana consists of thirty-five pieces mounted and bound in one volume, including letters from Wolfe's mother, the note his fiancée Katherine Lowther, wrote upon learning of his death, an autograph note of the General's, letters written by William Pitt, Lord Fitzmaurice, Admiral Warde, the Earl of Shelburne, and officers in the general's command, four small pencil sketches of General Wolfe by Thackeray with autograph notes, and a fragment of Southey's original manuscript for "The Life of General Wolfe." Other intetresting items are the silver crown-piece carried by Wolfe during the Battle of Quebec, a lock of his hair and miniature paintings of the General and some of his officers.

Another work intimately associated with General Wolfe are the two volumes in manuscript "General Wolfe's Evolutions.'' Most of the evolutions were his own inventions and were extensively used both in Europe and in America. This work evidently was written under his personal supervision.

A number of the books in this collection bear early Canadian imprints. ''Reglement de la Confrerie,'' 1776, is the first book to be printed in Montreal. ''Catechisme a l'Usage du Diocese de Quebec,'' 1791, is one of the earliest books printed in Quebec.

Among extra-illustrated books, of which there are a number in the collection, special attention should be drawn to Alfred Sandham's own copy of ''Ville-Marie; or Sketches of Montreal, Past and Present,'' to which he added over fifteen hundred portraits, autographs, views, maps and many other items of interest. Another collection also made by Sandham comprises six volumes of portraits, autographs, coats of arms, etc., of men prominent in the history of Canada.

Among other noteworthy books are ''Twelve Views of the Principal Buildings in Quebec,'' London (1761), no copy of which has been sold at auction; Charlevoix's Histoire et Description Generale de la Nouvelle France,'' Paris, 1744; ''A Sermon Preached at New-Court,'' London, 1759, celebrating the Taking of Quebec; Mackenzie's ''Voyages from Montreal,'' London, 1801; Heriot's Travels through the Canadas,'' London, 1807, with an original water-color drawing of Niagara Falls signed by the author-artist; Ralph's ''A Briefe Account,'' Dundas, 1836; Richardson's ''War of 1812'' (Brockville), 1842, and ''Œuvres de Champlain,'' Quebec, 1870, one of the most important editions of the explorer's works.
